Miss Lewis is 5'3, with blonde hair and blue eyes. She normally dresses in pastels suited to someone of her age and situation -- nineteen and unmarried, the daughter of a CBE. She is beautiful and has a melodic voice, and while she is a tolerable artist, she prefers performing to painting.

Notes

The younger of Sir William Lewis' twin children, Eugenia is intelligent and possesses her father's keen mind for intelligence and adventure -- if not his diplomatic skills. Her refusal of a marquess' proposal of marriage was so badly done that she earned the epithet "the rude" in polite society, where she is not always tolerated any longer. She longs for adventure, a la the Knights of the Round Table, and gets her more bookish brother, Stephen, into a good deal of trouble in pursuit of it.

Her father died several years ago, leaving the twins a modest fortune and a small estate in Kent.
